Asks Vacationists To Plan For Mail

With some schools already closed and others scheduled to close in the next few weeks, the annual trek to the mountains, country and seashore is already underway. Again Postmaster Stephen A. Boland issues an appeal to the public to arrange for the receipt or forwarding of their mail during the period they are absent from home on vacation.

The postmaster stated that each year police and postal authorities receive reports of breaking and entering of homes which were shown to be closed by an accumulation of mail in the box, newspapers collecting on the porch and other evidences of absence.

Voters To Act On Zoning Plan For Shawsheen

The question of amending the zoning laws to extend the business district in Shawsheen square to the west side of Poor street to include land and buildings owned by Esther Bredbury will be the principal matter of business to come before the special town meeting next Monday night.

The petitioner, who with her late sisters conducted a bakery and food shop there since 1930, wishes to have a soda fountain and lunch counter on the premises. There is no such lunch or soda counter business in the square since the spa went out of business.

The town planning board held a hearing on the question May 25. One member, Fred E. Cheever, because of his interest in the petition, withdrew from active participation in the matter, and another member, Walter C. Tomlinson, withdrew from participation as he had acted as a member of the board of appeals which denied the

1951 Tax Rate Up $4 To $40

The assessors announce a tax rate of $40 per $1000 for 1951, an increase of $4 over the $36 rate of the past two years.

The increase was largely due to the amounts appropriated for two new schools, salary increases for town employees, and a decrease in the amount received from the state. This was partly offset by an in-

Town To Purchase Parking Meters

The selectmen Monday night voted to pay outright for the 31 new parking meters recently purchased from the Michaels Arts Bronze Co., of Covington, Ky., for installation on Punchard avenue. They will get a discount which would not be obtained if they followed the regular course of paying for the meters monthly out of receipts.

Price of the new meters is $54 each, plus freight, making a total of $1694.30 subject to a five percent discount if paid before June 24.

It was voted to lay out Lincoln circle provided the plan is on file with the town clerk and approved by the planning board in time for the special town meeting June 25.

Permission was granted Elander & Swanton Inc., to hang a sign over the sidewalk at their place of business 56 Main st.

The 92nd commencement exercises of Punchard High School were held in the Memorial auditorium Tuesday night when diplomas were awarded to 97 graduates.

Members of the senior class, the girls for the first time clad in flowing white gowns, the boys with the familiar blue, and both wearing gold tasseled caps, made a striking appearance as they marched to their places on the rostrum to the strains of the traditional "War March of the Priests" played by the school orchestra.

Prayer by the Rev. P. J. Campbell, O.S.A., pastor of St. Augustine's church, was followed by a salute to the flag by Clifford Lawrence, after which the senior class sang the "Alma Mater."

The salutatory essay was read by Bessie Christie and the commencement address delivered by Frederick Ayer Jr., Harvard Law school graduate and former F.B.I. army intelligence officer.

After the seniors sang "Here's to our High School days" prizes were presented by Headmaster Harold Howe 2nd. This was followed with the valedictory given by Janet Merle Fieldhouse, and the exercises were concluded with the presentation of diplomas by the

BE ON YOUR GUARD against house-to-house peddlers of silverware now canvassing Andover in an attempt to reap a golden harvest from unrecognized brands of Sterling and Silverplated flatware.

THESE PEDDLERS are making misleading and untrue statements in comparing their wares with the nationally advertised and known-by-all brands sold at your dependable jeweler.

DO NOT BE DUPED by high-sounding, cleverly worded catch-phrases regarding values, weights and silver content.

REMEMBER, before you buy ANY, sterling or plate, you will obtain far better silver and values at your jeweler. Consult him... compare before you tie yourself down to a contract you'll regret having made.

WITH THE PEDDLER, the sale and the commission it brings are all that count. Your jeweler regards the sale as the BEGINNING of a transaction... your SATISFACTION is what matters and your jeweler is always at hand to insure that satisfaction.

The Class Of 1951

Congratulations to PUNCHARD's graduating class who received diplomas at the school's 92nd commencement exercises.

These young folks who have been associated in school work and play for so many years will now go their various ways, many to institutes of higher learning, others into business and industry.

Their graduation from high school marks an important step in their lives. They leave the pleasant surroundings of school to be immediately confronted with new problems in a world which seems more confused than ever.

However, they start out with the excellent training provided through years in the Andover school system, a training which should supplement honest and sincere efforts to reach the horizon of success toward which their eyes are focused.

They bravely face their new adventure in life buoyed with the knowledge that other graduates have gone from PUNCHARD and in succeeding years attained places of responsibility and distinction.

We hope that many of the Class of 1951 will do likewise. Congratulations graduates, and best wishes for a bright future.

Summer Mail

At this time of the year when thousands head for their favorite vacation spots the postoffice department finds it advisable to remind the public about the forwarding of their mail.

Postmaster Stephen A. Boland is now issuing such a notice so that arrangements can be made for prompt delivery of summer mail to vacationists. He points out that it is important that the name of the summer vacation postoffice or township be furnished as very often purely local names of summer resorts alone make it difficult to dispose of mail.

Another important consideration is that the piling up of mail at a front door serves notice that the people are away. Having it forwarded eliminates a possible cause of breaking and entering.

The postmaster also advises that upon leaving your vacation spot it would be well to notify postal authorities there so that they can dispose of any mail which may be received after your departure.

U. S. Help In India's Famine Is Bettering Our Position

The United States, heretofore used by Nehru as a "whipping boy" in Indian politics, may yet save the prime minister's scalp.

American wheat, dried beans, flour and other commodities, finally authorized by congress after debating the loan since February, should strengthen the hand of India's self-centered ruler, who is sorely beset by mounting troubles.

Among his current headaches are famine, inflation, scarcity of raw materials, declining industrial output, bad blood with Pakistan, Moslem-Hindu clashes in Kashmir, local communist terrorism, Red Chinese aggression in neighboring Tibet, a serious split in his own Congress Party and an uncertain general election late this year—enough pitfalls for any government.

Two million tons of American foodstuffs, in addition to the several hundred thousand tons of wheat already sold to India by America, will ease some of the partisan criticism directed at Nehru in Bihar, Madras, Bombay, West Bengal and other needy provinces.

These American supplies also will rob the Indian communists of further opportunities to exploit mass hunger to their own ends and to inflame Indian public opinion against the U. S. A.

The food emergency has not yet reached the level of the 1943 Bengal catastrophe, when five million died, but the helpless in Bihar and Madras already are eating leaves and roots. Disease is taking its toll of undernourished aged and children.

The monsoons, starting this month, will prevent food deliveries to outlying districts. The peak of misery comes in late July, when spring crops are exhausted and the fall harvests are not yet gathered.

The record shows that about once in every five years a major crop disaster hits India. Floods, earthquakes and droughts were back in this year's tragedy.

Then came a plague of locusts in the north. Some swarms took two hours to pass a given point and devoured ten square miles of crops when they alighted. Poison

Bertha Cuthill elected president of the C. E. society of the Free church.

Miss Miriam Sweeney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Sweeney of Central st., appointed music supervisor of the town schools to take the place of Miss Helen Dugid, who has taken a similar position in New Haven, Conn.

Exeter scores three runs with two out in the ninth to beat Andover 7-6 at Brothers field.

sprays and army flame-throwers were inadequate to stem the assault.

Progress Toward Self-Sufficiency Slow

No fair-minded critic can blame New Delhi for inability to completely solve a hunger problem that has cursed India for centuries. But neutral observers think the government could have done a better job had it been tougher and wiser.

It neglected to build up central food reserves. Provincial politicians, jittery over the coming elections, never enforced rationing in surplus crop areas. They also were afraid to crack down on money-lenders and on greedy merchants, who withheld stocks from the market in order to get higher prices.

The promised land distribution scheme has bogged down in many districts because of communal feuds and political rows. An area, capable of producing the two million tons of grain requested from Washington, lies fallow while politicians argue about forcing it into cultivation.

New Delhi's long-range famine preventative is huge fertilizer projects, reclamation of jungles and giant irrigation programs. The foundation stone for the world's highest dam in the Himalayan range has just been laid. When finished in 1956 its reservoirs will water land capable of yielding 1,300,000 tons of grain. Other irrigation measures have been taken. But it will be ten years before self-sufficiency in food is approached.

Some Indian economists maintain that major efforts should be concentrated on jute, peanuts and cotton, whose economic return is far greater than food crops. As exports these cash crops would bring in the money to finance irrigation projects that would free future generations from famine even though today's victims starve from lack of imported grain.

Reds Capitalizing on Famine

Of course, the communists are making hay of the food crisis. They are a motley crew. The wealthy nephew of the poet Tagore directs Red trade unions. Idealistic intellectuals, often educated in Oxford and other British universities stir up frustrated Indian students.

In the Madras-Hyderabad Red belt the communists are thugs. Train-wrecking, acid-throwing and murders have been common occurrences. Even though the jails are full, the number of Red rebels increases.

The famine has given the Marxists a new line. Instead of recognizing natural causes, they blame the entire situation on New Delhi. Their latest party platform declares: "The Nehru government has belied the hopes of the masses in every respect. The country is held at the mercy of the British and Americans."

"Peasants with land have the fruits of their labor looted by parasitic landlords and money-lenders through exorbitant rent, interest and state taxes. Landless peasants live in conditions of perpetual pauperism. Those who find jobs work like serfs and slaves, hardly getting a subsistence wage."

"As a result, production of food is falling, leading to starvation"

Diplomas Awarded To 97 At Punchard

SALUTATORY

By Bessie Christie

Parents and friends of the class of 1951,

As salutatorian of the class, it is my privilege to welcome you. In my greeting I hope to make you feel that you are being graduated with us. Actually, there is a part of you in each of us.

Possibly you can recall your own graduation—how, like us, you all marched up to the stage to some stirring tune, such as "War March of the Priests." Like us, you filed into your places and your president signaled you to be seated. The salutatorian rose. As he delivered his speech, you did not hear his words any more than my classmates are hearing mine. You were gazing out at the audience, searching for your parents or friends. When you spotted them and saw their reassuring smiles, you, too, felt reassured, and you relaxed.

Then the salutatorian's closing words echoed through your mind, and all you could hear was the applause—The applause! Yes! It blocked out your immediate environment. First, it transported you to the playstead. The fullback was plowing down the football field! The crowd was hooting, shouting, roaring. He scored the touchdown, the whistle blew, and once more Punchard had beaten its chief rival.

Next your mind drifted to a Friday in late May (or early June) when the prom committee and three-fourths of the junior class, getting in each other's way, were trying to decorate the gym for the "big event." When the time came to get birches on Friday morning, every junior boy was willing and available, as long as he was excused from classes.

Then you thought back to the night of the performance of the senior play. Backstage, the cast nervously awaited the raising of the curtain. In the audience, every senior suffered along with the cast and prayed for a success. Before one could realize it, the curtain had closed for the last act. The applause rang in your ears.

As the salutatorian returned to his seat, you watched him and wondered whether he would go on to college to play football and participate in other college activities, like dramatics and social affairs.

From this point on at your graduation, the time went rapidly because of the excitement in the awarding of scholarships and prizes. Before you knew it, the valedictorian was addressing you. She mentioned your future and you wondered. What was to become of you? Perhaps the country was in the midst of depression. You were in a class that was graduated to face adult problems. Perhaps the thought frightened you a little as you thought about it. But you could not disregard it. It was your problem. Perhaps you were graduated from high school at the outbreak of World War II. What could be worse, you wondered! You had completed so many years of schooling so that you might make something of yourself—and now what had happened? You were drafted.

Suddenly, you were awakened from your dreaming by the calling of names for diplomas. As you watched your friends step up for theirs and shake hands with the chairman of the awarding committee, you thought of them sitting beside you in class and participating in activities. As you waited your turn, you realized that you really hated to leave the "old place." You knew you would never find friends like these again. Just as your mind was planning for a class reunion, your thoughts were interrupted by the sound of your own name, and you were shaking the chairman's hand, and graduation was over for you too.

We young people are not essentially different from you on that day when you were sitting on the stage at your graduation. Every class feels that graduation day is as sad as it is happy. It is sad in our case because we have to live in a world that guarantees us nothing. Serious problems confront us: war, the draft, atomic bombs. Yet you had problems, too—maybe a little different from ours, but they were as important to you as ours are to us. You solved yours, as we shall ours.

Although we have problems, we have other thoughts. On graduation day we begin to realize how much our parents and teachers have done for us. All our lives, education has been almost forced on us, but the time we begin to appreciate it is now, when we are about to receive our diplomas. Receiving these diplomas means various

That editorial was written in October, 1857; and we weathered that situation. We face a similar one now, but we think it is many more involved than then. To a certain extent, they may be right; for admittedly, the world has made astounding changes in all directions. Scientists, once stumped by the natural phenomena of the earth, are now turning to the outer worlds. Buck Rogers' fantastic escapades will soon be obsolete. Wonder drugs and anti-histamines are replacing the old standby aspirin. Politicians, also mindful of the expanding horizons, are talking of compulsory draft laws not in terms of national military training,—not even worldwide,—but universal!

Indeed, the proverbial crossroads of life to which all graduates used to come has been replaced by the intricate traffic circle of a fast moving, modern world. The "parting of the ways" is no longer one of limited possibilities; for, although the world has always had a great deal to offer, opportunities are now broader than ever. The days when all girls became either nurses, schoolteachers, or housewives are gone forever. And all "respectable" young men need not be preachers, lawyers, or bankers.

We of today have a vast field of vocations from which to choose, and that is where the real challenge comes.

We are just as capable of facing our world of today as grandfather was of facing his 50 years ago. We must decide now what we desire in life,—set a goal for ourselves if you will,—and work toward that goal. Some of us have already had our immediate careers decided for us—in the armed forces. Others of us will not have the means or abilities for doing what we should like best. But a great deal is still left to us.

What we make of ourselves, whether in just the field we desire or not, is our own responsibility. Some will continue in school; others have already secured jobs.

The world, however involved, has something for all of us according to what we give it. We cannot drift about from one thing to another in these fast moving times, without getting washed under by those with definite plans.

We must learn a lesson from the motorist who approaches just such a traffic circle as we now face, not knowing which road he wants. He has not stopped to map out his routes, and so drives around and around the circle getting nowhere. The traveler who knows where he is going leaves the other far behind.

Few of us will choose to follow the same road as our classmates. But most roads meet somewhere along the way. And when they do, may we all be able to look back together with pride at the distance we have covered.

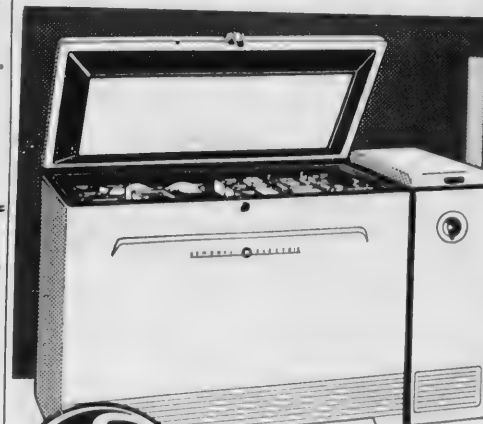

If you take the time to notice you'll see that the fellow everybody likes, generally likes everybody.

Public Opinion Toward America Changing

Although Americans are irritated by Nehru's softness toward Red China and his censure of United States policy, his own Reds accuse him of aiding the free world against Communism. "The government," continues the communist platform, "has not hesitated to send help, even though nominally medical, to the American troops in Korea."

"It has permitted British imperialists to recruit Gurkhas and Sikhs for suppression of Malaya's (communist) fight for independence. It has allowed landing bases for French planes on their way to fight against the Peoples (communist) Republic of Viet Nam."

Stalin's Indian stooges also were quick to exploit the fact that opportunist Peiping and Moscow offered grain while Washington debated similar moves. Nothing was said about Red China demanding strategic materials in return or that, previous to a small token cargo of Soviet grain, America already had shipped nearly 500,000 tons.

Nehru has been rather unappreciative of American aid. But the Indian press noted the strong editorial support for the grain loan by leading American papers. Also reported were cash gifts by American school children, "friendship-grain-for India" projects and other private contributions.

American humanitarianism already has changed the opinions of many Indian critics. Now that our food will ease famine conditions and blunt the edge of communist attacks on his government, perhaps even Nehru will be grateful for American help.

petition last March.

On June 7, the other three members of the planning board, Sidney P. White, chairman, Leon A. Field and Kirk R. Batcheller voted two to one against re-zoning. A report of the vote has been drafted and submitted to the town counsel, Mr. Tomlinson, for approval. It will be presented at the special town meeting.

The other articles to come before the meeting are; to see if the town will appropriate $10,000 to purchase or acquire certain lands near the central schools and playground; and to see if the town will vote to accept an extension of Lincoln circle. The planning board will act on this matter Friday night if plans in the proper form are filed by that time.

End Acceptance Of Boxford Pupils

New pupils from Boxford will not be accepted into the Andover school system after this coming September. For the past three years Andover has been taking Boxford pupils into the senior and junior high schools on a tuition basis.

About 45 Boxford students are enrolled here at present. Those now in the system and those entering next September will be allowed to complete their courses during the next six years, after which all will have been eliminated from the system.

This action was taken at last week's meeting of the school committee in executive session but was not announced until notification could reach Boxford officials.

The increase in the pupil load here, especially in the lower grades, is given as the reason for the committee's action.
